

ENG108, Fall 2017

Global English

This course brings into focus variation in English. Variation is viewed in the context of English as a global language. Global English will thus be a major topic of this course. In addition, the topics to be discussed are the following: standard and non-standard English, standard English as a sociolinguistic problem, myths and misunderstandings about English, differences between British and American English, and communicative competence.
